

NARRATIVE PRACTICES ADELAIDE

Maggie Carey, Shona Russell & Rob Hall

Exploring Narrative Approaches to Supervision

September 8,9,10 2010 with Shona Russell. Cost: $375.00

This three day skills based workshop has been designed for practitioners interested in narrative approaches to supervision. Narrative approaches offer many possibilities in supervision including a range of practices that re- invigorate professional identity, respectful ways of exploring complex concerns and challenges, and enlivening ways of creating an audience for the work people do.

Shona has a particular interest in supervision where workers experience significant distress in relation to their work and she will share examples of her work in a range of supervisory contexts. Participants will explore a range of practices that narrative practitioners find useful in working with colleagues and teams. There will be a specific focus on supervisory conversations with workers responding to violence, abuse and trauma in the context of injustice.

The following specific themes and practices will be explored:

- Negotiating supervision.
- The position we take as supervisors
- Re-storying professional identity through rich story development
- The role of externalizing conversations in interrupting internalized accounts of professional identity
- The rites of passage metaphor as it relates to professional identity
- The absent but implicit
- Creating audiences for re- storying professional identity

Our endeavour is to facilitate a learning context that is encouraging, rigorous and relevant to a range of diverse contexts. As well as working towards competencies in narrative practice we hope to foster supportive connections between practitioners. Whether you are an experienced supervisor, new to supervision or interested in furthering your understanding of narrative approaches to supervision there will be something of interest for you!

NARRATIVE PRACTICES ADELAIDE TEACHING FACULTY comprises Maggie Carey, Shona Russell and Rob Hall. We all work in Adelaide, South Australia, as counselors, teachers, supervisors and consultants. We are actively engaged as practitioners. Our work includes provision of counseling services in independent practice and a variety of community and organizational contexts.
